

DAILY PLANET

ALL THE NEWS THAT FITS

Thursday, April 12

2001

NASA 'Goes to the Stars' baseball game Friday

The NASA Exchange and Customer and Employee Relations Directorate are sponsoring a buyout night Friday for the Huntsville Stars' opening night baseball game against the West Tennessee Diamond Jaxx. Astronaut Ken Cockrell will throw out the first pitch. Game time is 7:05 p.m. at Joe Davis Stadium in Huntsville. Free tickets are available from admin officers. Each ticket admits four.

STS-98 crew to present mission
highlights at 10:15
a.m. Friday in Morris Auditorium

No taxi service
9 a.m.-1 p.m.
Friday due to astronaut visit

ASEM annual conference set Oct. 11-13 at Huntsville Marriott

The American Society for Engineering Management (ASEM) conference will be held Oct. 11-13 at the Huntsville Marriott. Abstracts on research results, instructional issues, work in progress, research proposals and case studies are solicited. Due dates and specifics are available on the Web at: engineering-management.org or asem.com. For more information, call 544-3645.

Health & Fitness Expo 2001 set Wednesday at Bldg. 4752

Marshall's annual Health & Fitness Expo will be from 10 a.m.-2 p.m. Wednesday at Bldg. 4752. The annual walk begins at 11 a.m. Prizes will be awarded for directorates with the most walking and the highest percentage participating.

Lunch tickets for April 24 STS-1
20th anniversary celebration on sale
through admin
officers