Stephenson Named Director

Oceaneering Executive Will Lead Marshall
Goldin Lauds Stephenson-Griner Team

New Director

NASA Administrator Dan Goldin announced today that Arthur G. Stephenson is the new director of Marshall Center. Stephenson has been president of Oceaneering Advanced Technologies since 1997. Previously Stephenson served in various positions with TRW. During remarks to Center employees today, Goldin introduced Stephenson and Deputy Director Carolyn Griner as “the team who will take NASA and planet Earth to Mars.” He is expected to begin directing day-to-day operations within two weeks.
